

ABSTRACT

A method of forming a fin for a fin field effect transistor (FinFET) includes defining a trench in a layer of first material, where a width of an opening of the trench is substantially smaller than a thickness of the layer. The method further includes growing a second material in the trench to form the fin and removing the layer of first material.